Leopold to Speak at C. of C. Dinner in Barlow Friday

New Board of Directors Will Be Announced at Banquet

NATIONAL SPEAKER

Large Turn-Out Expected for U. S. Chamber of Commerce Official

The annual banquet meeting of Hope Chamber of Commerce will be addressed at 7:30 o'clock Friday night in Hotel Barlow by Joseph F. Leopold, southwestern manager of the United States Chamber of Commerce, of Dallas.

Close to 100 persons are expected to attend, including the chamber membership and the Rotary and Kiwanis club members who will attend in a body, Friday night's meeting taking the place of their regularly scheduled luncheon this week.

Chamber of commerce members will hear annual reports at the banquet, and announcement of the election of 17 directors for the new year. Balloting for the board of directors closed Wednesday night, the membership having voted on a list of 24 nominees, half of them to be elected.

The day following the annual banquet it is customary for the new board to meet and organize, electing officers for the new year.

Despite a business year during which few public meetings have been held, Mr. Leopold is expected to be greeted by a large attendance Friday night. He is a well known business organizer and speaker, having traveled over the entire South and Southwest in his capacity as district manager for the U. S. Chamber.

Hope business men obtained his engagement some time ago for Friday night, believing the local public would welcome the kind of information as to the future business outlook which Mr. Leopold will bring with him from Dallas.

Governor Parnell Visits Shreveport

Urges Uniform Cotton Reduction Laws in Talk Over Radio

SHREVEPORT, La.—(AP)—Governor Harvey Parnell of Arkansas Thursday night urged before a radio audience the "necessity of the 16 cotton growing states" agreeing on uniform cotton acreage reduction laws to prevent a further piling up of surplus stocks.

Speaking over radio station KWKK Governor Parnell pleaded for a "spirit of compromise" between the states and between the exporters of various cotton acreage reduction plans.

Governors of the cotton growing states were urged by him to attend and bring delegations, to the uniform cotton acreage reduction legislation conference which he and Governor Theodore G. Bilbo have called for next Monday at Jackson, Miss.

Paying tribute to Governor Huey P. Long of Louisiana, as the official who took the first step toward cotton acreage reduction laws, Governor Parnell said he believed all friends of the movement should come to the conference prepared to effect a compromise out of a dozen plans for relief of the cotton farmer.

"It does not become any one of us to become arrogant to the extent the plan we personally approve must be the only plan," he said. "We are moved by a common purpose that out of our joint efforts shall come common good to all our people in that we will have accomplished something which will promote the lasting prosperity of our country."

"With this thought in mind, I most earnestly urge the representative delegations, clothed with authority to act, to attend the meeting at Jackson. It is my hope that the governors of all the cotton producing states may be present with legislative committees, if possible, and that not only these, but farmers, lawyers, bankers and all other citizens who have at heart the interest of our common country, may also be present to lend us their aid and counsel and that from our joint efforts may come a plan acceptable to all and which will prove of great and lasting benefit to the country."

Consolidation of Baptist Colleges To Start at Once

Commission Head Issues Statement From Little Rock Friday

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The Rev. Otto Whittington, chairman of the Permanent Education Commission of the Arkansas Baptist State Convention, said here Friday the commission will attempt to carry out "immediately and completely" the consolidation of Baptist colleges, but that it did not expect "to break any contracts or pledges our people may have made."

"The Commission has no fight to make against anyone," he said. "We have been charged by our people with a great task and we will do our best to carry it out immediately and completely, we have no intention or desire to be unfair to break faith with any group of our people who are interested. Neither do we expect to break any contracts or pledges our people may have made."

Cotton Exports To Orient Rising

American Shipments 100 Pct. Ahead of 1930, Texan Estimates

DALLAS, Tex.—(AP)—Robert Mayer, acting president of the Dallas Cotton Exchange, said Thursday that the total of cotton exports to the Orient thus far this year is approximately 100 per cent greater than at the same period last year.

Japan, United Kingdom, India, and other countries have been importing from the United States 528,000 bales, compared with 305,000 bales in the same period last year, and China had imported from this country 370,000 bales, compared with 141,800 bales in the same period last year. Cotton men estimated that 70 or 75 per cent of the shipments this year have been to Texas cotton.

"The possibility of war in the Far East has nothing to do with it," Mayer insisted. "The price is the thing that counts. Last year 3,448,000 bales of cotton were exported to Japan. Of that amount, 1,977,000 bales were American cotton, 1,471,000 Indian and 485,000 Chinese cotton."

"At present, American cotton is much cheaper than the Indian and heavy flood damaged the Chinese crop to such an extent that both Japanese and Chinese buyers are turning to this country for their supply."

Borrowers Given a Cold Reception

Balanced Budgets Necessary Before Loans Can Be Approved

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(AP)—Charles McCabe, commissioner of finance and taxation and a member of the funding board, said that the Tennessee funding board received a "cold reception" when it went to New York to borrow $10,000,000 this week.

He told the joint legislative finance ways and means committee that the financiers and bond buyers insisted that states, counties and municipalities must balance their budgets before any loans will be granted.

He urged reduced appropriations and new taxes as the only solutions to the situation.

Rail Lines Balk at Gift Proposal

Commission Plan for Pool of New Revenue May Be Modified

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The railroads Thursday asked for changes in the Interstate Commerce Commission's plan for strengthening their credit by pooling revenues from new surcharges.

Neither rejecting nor accepting the proposal, the carriers presented the transportation tribunal with an outline of a "Railroad Credit Corporation" which would be established to administer the pool.

Although five changes were asked only one was considered of vital importance. This would specify that lines receiving money from the pool accept such advances as loans. The commission plan had been interpreted as calling for gifts to needy lines.

Some of the larger and more prosperous roads oppose any plan calling for gifts. They challenge the legality and justice of the scheme. There have been indications they might refuse to participate unless the change is made.

Some commission officials thought hearings on arguments would be necessary before any change to permit loans can be made. The other alterations could easily be granted without hearings, it was said.

The commission proposed the pooling plan when it denied the railroads' plea last month for a 15 per cent freight rate increase.

Arkansas River Valley Towns Plan to Investigate Utility

The Russellville plant was selected as one representative to the group. Towns represented at the meeting were Dardanelle, Russellville, Pottsville, Atkins, Morrilton and Conway.

Theaters Will Aid Unemployed Here

Manager Schuster to Give Special Show at Saenger November 25

Howard Schuster, manager of the Saenger theater, has been selected as chairman of the city committee in charge of arrangements for an unemployed benefit show at the Saenger next Wednesday, November 25.

Associated with Mr. Schuster will be a merchants committee headed by John P. Cox and R. V. Herndon.

In starting its campaign the City Committee takes its place with similar committees in every city of the United States, working in conjunction with the Committee on Mobilization of Relief Resources of the President's Organization on Unemployment, of which Owen D. Young is chairman. It is expected that 20,000 theatres throughout the nation will give special benefit performances to a total attendance of more than 15,000,000 persons.

The contribution of the motion picture industry takes the form of a National Motion Picture Week for Local Unemployment Relief, from November 18 to November 25. Each City Committee has selected one day during that week on which every theatre in the community will present a special show, the entire proceeds of which are to go towards local unemployment relief.

With Wednesday, November 25 selected as Motion Picture Day in this city, every effort is being exerted towards raising a maximum amount for local unemployment relief. The full amount of money collected from the Saenger will be turned over intact to the City Committee and by them turned over to the proper agencies for distribution among the unemployed of this city.

The performances to be given in the theatre on Motion Picture Day will be entirely distinct from the regular performances at this theatre. Saenger will issue special tickets of admission to these shows.

The money collected through the giving of the benefit show will be derived solely from the prices paid for admission tickets. There are to be no collections made, and no other appeals made in connection with Motion Picture Day. In order to make the occasion as enjoyable as possible for the contributors, there will be little or no speech-making from the stage of the theatre.

Cashier One of Two Held in Bank Raid

Money Taken in Raid at Palestine Is Recovered

PALESTINE, Tex.—(AP)—Rapid developments in investigation, within 24 hours after the First National Bank of Palestine was robbed of $8386 Wednesday, had resulted Thursday in recovery of the money and charges being filed against Porter Cooper, cashier of the bank, and Howard Wingate.

Wingate was arrested late Wednesday and in a signed statement to officers, named Cooper as his accomplice. He told of entering the bank and hearing five employees into the vault at the point of a pistol. After locking them in, he collected the money in a bag but for some unexplained reason, did not take it out of the bank.

The money, hidden in a compartment under the cashier's desk, was recovered by Detective Norman York.

CLARKSVILLE.—Morris Smith, aged 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Smith of East Clarksville, died Thursday night at the Johnson County hospital following injuries received Wednesday afternoon when the axle of the truck on which he was riding broke, 10 miles north of Clarksville.

The young man jumped and was caught between the truck and embankment, crushing his chest, breaking his arm and collarbone and injuring him internally. He was employed at the Biggs stove mill.

At the time of the accident he was riding with two brothers, neither of whom was injured. Besides his parents he is survived by six brothers, all of Clarksville.

Highways Damaged in East Arkansas

Six Patrolmen to Enforce Weight Limit in Memphis Area

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(AP)—Notice was served Thursday by Andy McNeill, chief of the Arkansas highway patrol, that hereafter load limit regulations will be rigidly enforced on highways leading to Memphis.

The order applies to highways 61 and 40, which extend from West Memphis, Ark., to the Missouri state line and from Lepanto to Osceola. There is no load limit regulation on highway 70, the other eastern Arkansas traffic lane.

Mr. McNeill said that six patrolmen had been assigned to the two roads to enforce the order. Under the law a five-ton load is fixed as the maximum.

George Martin, assigned to direct operations of the patrolmen, said Thursday that both of the highways affected had been damaged severely by overloaded trucks and the concrete cracked in a dozen places. Chief officers, he said, were trucks hauling cotton and cottonseed, although in some instances regular trucking lines carrying miscellaneous freight have disobeyed the law.

Mr. Martin said that the five-ton load maximum applied to trucks and trailers with semi-trailers or "six wheelers." Trucks with four-wheel trailers rate as two units, he said, and a five-ton load may be carried on each unit.

A. W. Baigalupo, municipal weighmaster here, concurred in the contention made by the Arkansas officials that trucks moving into Memphis had exceeded the load limit. Net loads of seed, he said, had averaged between seven and eight tons.

FIVE PERSONS HURT

Warren Dispatches Tent to Stricken Area in Bradley County

(By The Associated Press) Tornado winds struck in two widely separated sections of south Arkansas early Friday, resulting in considerable property damage and the injury of five persons.

Pine Bluff was swept by a tornado wind which dipped several times, damaging or wrecking several buildings and demolishing a store at Revere across the Arkansas river from Pine Bluff.

Another Revere store was left standing at a forty-five degree angle. The damage in Pine Bluff was estimated at several thousand dollars.

Near the scene of the 1927 tornado which wrecked the town of Strong, in Union county, several buildings were wrecked and a family of three were caught in the debris of their farm home, injuring them slightly.

Apparently the same storm moved into Bradley county, blowing down several farm houses.

The Warren Chamber of Commerce arranged for the dispatch of tents to house several families, whose homes were blown down.

One two story house with seven persons was blown twenty-five feet from its foundation but none were injured.

Where Community Work Counts

FOR the last month I have had a newspaper clipping on my desk. It is from El Dorado. It says that Union county farmers are shipping in a carload of hogs from the drouthdevastated farms of South Dakota.

Out in South Dakota the farmers haven't feed enough to carry their livestock through another winter.

Down in Union county the farmers have plenty of feed-stuff and not enough livestock to feed it to.

What could be a better swap than to take livestock out of a parched country and transplant it where feed is going to waste?

Naturally I am masking myself where Hempstead county comes in on this deal. There isn't any comparison between the farmlands of this and Union county. Hempstead was raising famous crops long before oil men came along to make Union county something besides a wilderness of pine and sand.

The heart of the real Arkansas farming country is here, not in Union. And if anyone has a surplus of feedstuff and a shortage of livestock to feed it to, it is the Hempstead farmer and not his southern neighbor.

Here we are on the ground floor of a national panic, when industry and agriculture have a chance to buy at their own figure, lay the foundations of a future prosperity —but we do nothing.

The proposal that comes out of Union county is not only beneficial to Arkansas, but it is sound economics for the South Dakota farmers and the country in general. When feed is scarce, livestock has to be sold. If it isn't salvaged by the farmers who do have feedstuff, then off it goes to the meat packers at ruinously low prices.

Both lose in that deal—the South Dakota farmer and his Arkansas compatriot; for while the South Dakotan is selling his hogs for a song, the Arkansan is holding a barnful of feed that he can't give away.

Perhaps a carload of hogs wouldn't interest us in Hemp-stead county. But a shipment of cattle might. What we need is a livestock credit bank or farmer-business man's pool to finance just such a movement as El Dorado has launched from the drouth area of South Dakota.

Needless to say, the prime figure in this El Dorado story is Lynn Smith, Union county farm agent. Mr. Smith used to be here until Hempstead cut out the county agents' work.

I know that economy rules the land today. But what is economy? Is it driving South Dakota hogs off to the meat packers for a song, when with a little concerted effort Hempstead county farmers could manage them through the winter at a profit?

Blevins, McCaskill Celebrate

AS THIS is written the Blevins Special School district is dedicating newly-completed buildings at Blevins and Mc-Caskill Friday. The celebration at Blevins marks the successful consolidation of ten local districts into one. This year a brand new high school building has been erected at Blevins, the old structure has been remodeled as a fine grade school; and the McCaskill building has been enlarged and improved. As W. J. Whiteside tells us in one paragraph of his news-story in last Tuesday's Star, this is the thrilling story of District No. 34:

From a two-teacher rural school it has grown into a 15-teacher system carrying a fully-accredited four-year high school course. From a two-room frame building the plant has been increased to three brick structures with a total of 19 class-rooms, an auditorium with a 500 seating capacity, an office and a library room.

Here is an accomplishment that will outlast the memory of hard times. Although we use money for a measuring stick, fortunes come and go, and good years and lean years are a never-ending cycle. But the thing that rides by our side forever through life is the permanent record we have built in our schools, our churches, and the trained and law-abiding people which these institutions turn out to carry on the work of the community.

Published reports tell us these are hard times—but getting better. Blevins and McCaskill planned big works because they knew that what they proposed to do had no relation either to prosperity or panic. And the record of years to come will show they are right—for in this work Americans never have been wrong.

The Navy Squabble

IT IS hardly surprising that the committee chosen by President Hoover to pass on the "abysmal ignorance" charges of the head of the Navy League should have turned in a report upholding the president. The charges voiced by the Navy League president were wild, on their face; that the gentleman speaking out of turn could be deduced as soon as the statement was read.

Indeed, now that the smoke of battle has died away, it is possible to wonder whether President Hoover needed to take any notice of the accusation in the first place. A propaganda organization is expected to attack any public official who does things of which it does not approve, and most people pay very little attention.

 finally moved to the street and open-

Painful Piles

Go Quick—No Cutting—No Salves
 It takes only one bottle of Dr. J. S.
 Leonhardt's prescription—HEM-ROID —to end itching, bleeding, protruding piles. This internal remedy acts quickly even in old, stubborn cases. HEM-ROID succeeds because it heals and restores the affected parts and removes blood congestion in the lower bowel—the cause of piles. Only an internal medicine can do this, that why salves and cutting fail. Ward Son say HEM-ROID Tablets must er-your Pile misery or money back.—Ad

In bleak November, when the earth
And sky
With somber hues confess the waning year;
When drifted leaves along the fence-
row lie,
And sumac stalks their reddened
spires uprear;
On such chill days, with yearning in my heart,
We tread a tangled path beloved of old,
And lo— at last, where thinning
brambles part,
Bursts on our sight the bittersweet's red and gold!
Hither and thither twists the flaming vine,
Up the green cedar, through the creeping brier,
Like new struck sparks the clustered berries shine, Warming the laden landscape with their fire,
Filling the wintry soul with cheerful glow
That scorns the first gray flakes of sifting snow.—Selected.

Two Accept Bids To Cotton Parley

Georgia and South Carolina Governors Will Attend Jackson Meeting

JACKSON, Miss.—(P)—Governors of two cotton states thus far have accepted the invitation of Gov. Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi and Gov. Harvey F. Parnell of Arkansas to attend the uniform cotton legislative round table conference here November 23 and a majority of other Southern cotton growing states will send representatives. Governor Bilbo's office announced Wednesday.

Gov. Iba Blackwood of South Carolina and Gov. Richard Russell Jr. of Georgia have promised to attend. Bilbo telegraphed invitations to the governors of 11 cotton-growing states, urging their presence.

Five Mississippi bankers were appointed by the governors to represent the state's banks at the meeting. All are members of the state bankers association which co-operated with other banking associations in Southern states in a pledge to hold 3,500,000 bales of cotton from the market until next July.

The five bankers selected were J. W. Slaughter, Columbus; Frank Foote, Hattiesburg; Melchior Beltzhoover, Natchez; Floyd Parker, Canton; and Thad Lampton, Jackson.

Small Hitch Hiker Held at Hot Springs

10-Year-Old Boy Tells Officers of Friend in West Texas

HOT SPRINGS.—(P)—A 10-year-old boy who ran away from home and hitch-hiked nearly a thousand miles in two days is being held here pending word from his relatives.

The boy, Audie Parks, a clean cut, rosy cheeked little chap was on his way to "west Texas." He didn't know who it was he wanted to see except that it was a man by the name of Baker. He explained that Baker lived in "west Texas" and was a friend of his uncle.

"But west Texas is a big place," officers here told him, "and how do you expect to find this man if you don't know where he lives."

"Well, that's all right," Audie explained, "if I don't find him, I'll look around for some other good family that needs a little boy and who will send me to school."

And then came a story from the little fellow of how, because of conditions he was unable to go to school. He left his mother, six brothers and two sisters, he said, because he didn't want to be dependent on his uncle who was supporting the family.

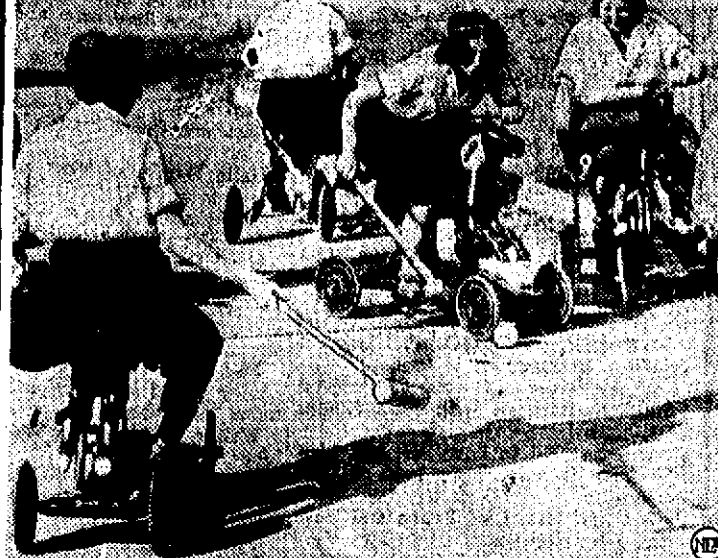

"You know," he mused, "I ought to be in school."

Lucky Landing

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—Gliding to a landing at the Fond du Lac Airport, James Hansen and a passenger had a miraculous escape from death when they crashed through high tension wires carrying 66,000 volts of electricity. As the wires parted under the impact of the plane, there was a blinding flash as the current short-circuited. Lights in the neighborhood were out for hours after the crash before the damage could be repaired. Hansen managed to land safely after the crash.

Gems of Peril

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MARY HARKNESS plots to ensnare THE FLY, who she believes is the murderer of old MRS. JUPITER, and later on Eddie, down town. She is aided by BOWEN of the star, Mary Harkness, who is a police officer. DICK BUTLER, believes Eddie guilty, as do police who drop the case.

BRUCE JUPITER, long absent, returns from Europe with a woman friend. His father orders him out and Mary his heir. Bruce returns, vowing to root out Mary, who he thinks is a gold-digger.

Dick forbids Mary to see Bowen or continue the investigation. He says if she goes to Miami on the Jupiter yacht he will believe Bruce's charges. Mary goes because Bowen tells her The Fly may be at his den when his horse runs. Dick shows attention to his former sweetheart, COLE, MELIA TABOR.

Mary is introduced to COUNT DE LOMA. De Loma is listed as owner of The Fly's horse. She sees De Loma and COUNTESS LOUISE, Bruce's friend, in secret conversation. She also learns that MR. JUPITER has a car of the same make as that which the murderer used in his get-away and which later killed Eddie. Mr. Jupiter explains the car was bought for experimental purposes in his business.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXIII

WHAT had happened at Hilltop Inn, as Bowen told it, was this: After waiting in vain for Mary to telephone him, he had hired a car and driven out the Dixie Highway to the Inn to see for himself what happened to her. He found the place empty except for the proprietor and went inside the frame shack to telephone the Ambassador and ask if she was there.

While standing at the wall telephone he heard a party arrive and seat themselves at a porch table. They were quiet enough at first, ordering soft drinks over which the woman cooed with interest, but presently their voices rose excitedly.

Bowen, who was enduring one of those interminable waits which seem to ensue whenever a hotel clerk is assailed by a request for information, exchanged a mused glance with the waiter, and they both frankly listened.

The argument seemed to be over a diamond bracelet which fell out of the woman's hand when she took out powder and lipstick to refresh her faded complexion, according to the man behind the counter, who enjoyed a full view of the fracas.

"Who gave it to you? Who gave it to you?" the woman's companion demanded repeatedly, grasping her wrist.

"But it is not what you think!" the woman protested. "It was given to me to hold as security for a loan of money. When the money is paid back, I give back the bracelet!"

The quiet listless statement induced in the infuriated lover was more ominous than his rage, however.

"You—loaned—my—money? To whom? De Loma?"

"Your money?" the Countess retorted with spirit and perhaps with justice, for Bruce's allowance was far from princely these days. "When do I ever see your money? No, it was the money I won on the horse-race. And I loaned it to a woman—not a man. You are mad if you say I—"

"You gave it to De Loma," Bruce repeated calmly.

"It was a woman, I tell you! Stupid, what would a man be doing with a bracelet like that?"

"I am wondering," Bruce replied. "Bowen, who had now possessed himself of a knothole view of the proceedings, was convinced by the unyielding hardness of Bruce's lips and expression that the incident had opened a new vein of thought to the young man—and one which might prove fruitful.

The Countess, obviously frightened, resorted to tears, recriminations, pouts and sobs. There were wails of: "You are a beast. You do not love me!"

"Oh, yes, I love you, my dear Louise. But if I loved you twice as much, I still shouldn't put up with your lies."

"You don't believe me?"

"No, my dear Louise, I do not."

At this point dear Louise quite lost her head, and hurled a volley of gutter French at her erstwhile lover, who sat calmly sucking at the straw of his lemon soda until her outburst was over.

Not too lost to reason to be crafty, the Countess abandoned her tirade as suddenly as she began it and sank into her chair, trembling and tearful.

"Well, then, I will tell you," she said. "I promised to say nothing to anyone. But, since you are such a pig, I break that promise. When we get back to the hotel, I show her to you."

"Her—who?"

"The one I loan money to—the one whose bracelet it is!"

Bruce was puzzled but unconvinced. "All right, who was it?" she snapped.

"Well, then—if I must tell you—Miss Harkness! But please—do not let her know I say this—"

Bruce digested this a moment.

"What would Mary Harkness be doing with a bracelet like that? That's worth $5000 if it's worth a cent! And why should she borrow money from you when she could pawn it? And why should she need money anyway?"

The Countess shrugged. "How do I know where she gets the bracelet? Perhaps some man gives it to her—perhaps your father?"

Bruce snapped "You're crazy!" But his laugh did not carry conviction.

"She does not wish to pawn it because of . . . the sentiment . . ." the Countess continued, "so . . ."

Bruce snorted incredulously.

"She'd pawn it before she'd let you have it," he decided. "She hates you, you know, because she thinks I'm going to marry you." He realized his error in bringing up the subject of marriage, evidently, by the quick flush that overspread his face. The Countess' steady look did not waver.

"And . . ." she purred significantly.

"We'll not talk about that," Bruce cut her off. "We've talked it all out before a dozen times. I owe something to my father's wishes. And besides, as I've told you, for me to do that would simply mean that he would cut me off without a penny. Life in a Paris garret holds no charms for me, and as for you, my dear Louise," he threw back his head and laughed boisterously. "Fah! You make always the excuse," Louise replied coldly. "But I no longer believe that. Le papa is not an ogre such as you paint him—he is a sweet enfant, that papa of yours! He is not bad like you say!"

"No? Call him father, and see what a sweet infant he is. Don't be fooled simply because he hasn't thrown you out of the house. He's too wise for that. But let the wedding bells tinkle ever so little, and you'll see! Besides, I have an idea that in his own sweet time he is planning to put the sticks under our little romance anyway—"

"If we marry first and tell him when it is done—" Louise persisted.

"No, I tell you!"

"Very well, then." Something about her deadly quiet should have warned him. "Very well. Then suppose I tell you it was De Loma?" Her tone changed to a shrill fishwife scream. "Why should I not help him when he is in trouble? Is it nothing that once we were lovers? Ha, you did not know that, did you? I tell you this now—I loved him more than ever I have loved you! At least he is a man of his word and that is more than you are, Monsieur Bruce Jupiter, the artist!"

THrusting the bracelet defiantly on her white arm, the thoroughly heated young woman flounced off in high dudgeon. After a brief interval there sounded from the road the low chuckle and roar of the Lorimer's engine starting up and the diminishing sound of its passage into the distance.

Bruce continued to smoke and to sip his drink in silence, making no move to follow. If Louise's taunt had jarred him he did not show it. His bland and unruffled countenance was as carefree, his manner as debonair as if he were seated at a sidewalk table of one of his own Paris cafes. Bowen began to fear that he was to be kept smothering behind the hot wooden wall of the shack indefinitely, until a quick reconnaissance showed that he could leave by the far door and gain his own car without being seen by the preoccupied Bruce.

It was a low trick to go off and leave the other man marooned in that out-of-the-way spot but he did not relish being caught in the role of eavesdropper. And he fancied Bruce would not care for the idea, either.

Besides, Bowen had a notion this would be an excellent time to secure a snapshot of the lady—while her cavalier was far away, and in no mood for smashing cameras or impertinent reporters' noses.

"She got away from me, though," Bowen concluded sadly. "The Lorimer went away from there like a bat out of hell. That coughing old taxi of mine couldn't even sight it. But I'm laying for her just the same. Borrowed a grafax from one of the picture men on the News front door of the Ambassador unless they chase me away. And I don't think they will. I've oiled the doorman with a tip on top of fourth race tomorrow and a pass to the track, and we're old college chums now."

"Listen, chase her out to me, can't you? It's a swell chance. The sun's right, everything's O. K. I've got a hunch I can dig up some dirt on her if the boys in the police morgue get a good look at her."

Mary was more than dubious; she was frightened.

"She wouldn't do anything for me," she objected. "I'm afraid of that woman, to tell the truth! And from your account, she must be wild!"

"Oh, have a heart! Yell 'fire' or something! Shoo her out here just long enough for me to get a picture. I'll wait. Better hurry, though, before Bruce gets back and makes it up with her, the sap."

"I don't promise anything," Mary said. "I can try, but that's all."

"O. K."

Mary replaced the receiver on the book thoughtfully. After a moment she took it down again and asked the clerk if the Countess had come in yet. Told that she had, she asked for room service and ordered sandwiches and iced drinks sent up to her own room. Then, with trepidation turning her knees to jelly, she went down the hall and tapped on the other woman's door. If she lost a moment, she knew her courage would ooze away entirely.

"Who is it?" came in muffled tones after a moment's pause.

"It's I," Mary said gently, trying to soften the blow. Louise must have hoped to hear Bruce's voice, contrite and pleading.

"What do you want?" The door was jerked open about a foot, revealing the Countess in heeled mules and a thin green silk robe, her thick black hair pushed back as she wiped cold-cream from her cheeks with a towel. Wiped clean of make-up, she looked younger than Mary had ever seen her—like a sulky, sensuous child. Her eyes bore the traces of recent tears.

"I've sent for some tea—I thought you'd like some—I didn't know you weren't feeling well," Mary stammered.

THE Countess averted her tell-tale eyes. She walked about the room restlessly, stopping to shake an empty packet of cigarettes. She tossed it away angrily.

"Come just as you are," Mary urged. "There's no one about."

Perhaps Louise surprised herself as well as Mary, but she came, wrapping her robe more securely about her. Perhaps her tiff with Bruce had made her welcome female company for a change.

"Tea?" she exclaimed scornfully. "In this weather? Horrible idea!"

"Iced tea. The American version. It's really very good. Try it."

With a pronounced sneer on her lips, Louise stretched out a white bare arm and accepted a glass gingerly. Midway of the soft round forearm flashed a beautiful diamond bracelet.

"Oh, what a divine bracelet!" Mary exclaimed. "Have I seen it before?"

At the same moment that the words came from her lips, the realization came to her that she had seen it before—on the arm of Mrs. Jupiter! Of course, that was what happened. The Fly, unable to dispose of the loot because of the tremendous publicity given the case, together with a minute description of the jewels, was reduced to the expedient of borrowing on it from his erstwhile love. He must have been hard pressed for money, and probably risked letting it out of his possession only on that hard-headed business woman's insistence.

But chance had foiled their intention of secrecy. Or had the Countess let the beautiful bauble be seen deliberately? Bruce's affections needed whipping up, if Mary was any judge. And a little discreet jealousy would do the trick! The Countess stood without replying. She had no idea how De Loma had come by the bracelet and the thought that Mary might be speaking seriously disquieted her. This was only for a moment.

"Do you like it?" she said negligently. "It was a present from my—my former husband."

Mary felt a choking sense of excitement. She must get that bracelet! It would be damning evidence against The Fly—perhaps enough in itself to hang him for Mrs. Jupiter's murder.

As she stood turning the circle in her fingers, pretending to examine it, there came a loud rap at the door. Both women jumped.

Arrested at Cincinnati in Arkansas Diamond
Mine Case

CINCINNATI, Ohio.—(P)—Sus E. E. of Texarkana, Texas, was arrested here Thursday on a federal warrant charging use of the mails to defraud in connection with operations of the American Diamond Mine Corporation of Arkansas.

She was secretary of the company, investigation of which caused one man to be sentenced to 15 months imprisonment, another to be fined and a third to be indicted.

Walter F. Hintz, president of the company, pleaded guilty to using the mails to defraud and after being sentenced to a year and a day in prison, withdrew his plea and asked permission to stand trial.

Walter J. Mauney, owner of a tract of land leased by the company in Pike county, Arkansas, was given a suspended fine of $750, and William I. Leathers, a promoter, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 15 months.

Miss Nash had worked in a department store here, but was married recently to a Cincinnati school teacher.

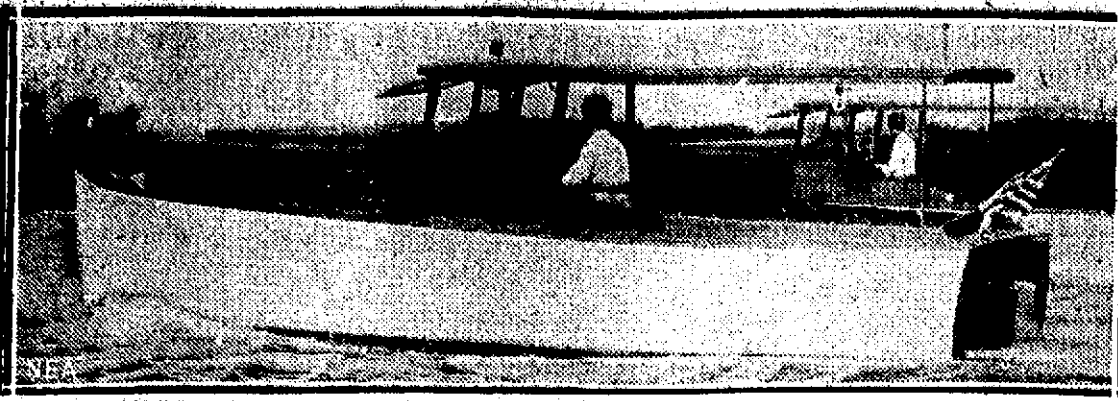

Mena Residents Doubt Robbery Suspect's Guilt

MEANA, Ark.—Relatives and friends in Mena have made the $1000 bond required for Garland Chamberlain, who has been partially identified as one of the three men who held up the bank of McRae, Ark., on November 16.

It is not believed here that Chamberlain is connected with the robbery, that the young carpenter is a victim of mistaken identity is the opinion of those who know the man and his family.

Chamberlain's parents and brother live here, but he has made his headquarters at Little Rock for some years past. The accused is known as an industrious and saving worker and in recent years has purchased several pieces of local realty from his savings.

Garner's body was found beside the Kilgore highway six miles from Longview November 16. He had been shot.

Statements concerning the shooting were made by the four-year-old son of Chambers.

Biggest Liquor Haul Is Made by Prohi Officers

WASHINGTON.—(P)—There's a secret trick in it, but federal prohibition agents were overjoyed Thursday at having caught nine liquor cars, 18 men and one woman during one night of highway arrests outside Washington.

Agent J. R. Brewer, in charge would not tell how it was done, but apparently a hidden outpost took the numbers of all autos stopping at a suspected house in Maryland and flashed them to agents posted on the Washington road. It was the biggest haul made by Southern Maryland agents this year.

Three Missing in Duck Boat Blaze

Mississippi Men Feared Drowned; Belongings
in Damaged Craft

GREENVILLE, Miss.—(P)—Discovery of the burned hull of a duck-hunting boat occupied by three Greenville men led authorities Thursday night to believe the men drowned when they leaped from the burning craft into the Mississippi river at Sunnyside towhead south of here.

Those missing are: E. H. Brandon, 34, attorney; Robert E. Cannon, 32, manager of an oil firm; George Ring, 21, employee of an oil company.

Watches, keys and shotguns belonging to the men were found in the burned boat by Chief of Police Taggart, who headed a searching party.

Major T. B. Larkin, Vicksburg, in charge of the government river forces in this district was asked to furnish equipment for dragging the river in the vicinity of the burned boats.

Searchers were led to believe the boat was that used by Brandon and his party when a black leather aviation helmet believed to have been worn by Ring was found floating near the craft.

The party left on the hunting trip late Tuesday and was due back Thursday.

The paper is pure. Clean. White. The best cigarette paper that money can buy.

There is cleanliness in every step of CHESTERFIELD's manufacture. Old-fashioned methods have been discarded, and CHESTERFIELDS are made and packed in modern sanitary factories where even the air is washed, and changed every four-and-one-half minutes.

Every day more men and women are changing to CHESTERFIELD. And changing for good! Four big reasons clinch the choice: Milder—Taste Better—Pure—Satisfy.
